

About AMPHS

The Academy of Medical & Public Health Services (AMPHS) is a not-for-profit health service organization based in Sunset Park, Brooklyn with a triple aim to identify barriers to health and wellness in underserved immigrant communities; coordinate truly needed primary care with social assistance; and deliver care with dignity and empathy to marginalized New Yorkers. Through its community public health interventions, AMPHS lends to the empowerment of individuals and communities to create their own local and culturally-sensitive health and wellness paradigms.

Equally important to promoting disease prevention are our services tackling social determinants of health and barriers to care. Currently, AMPHS focuses on primary programs: health screenings, wellness consultations, care coordination, social services, literacy classes, and immigrant rights education. Together, these services create a safe, open environment where local residents can discuss health and social concerns and seek care without regard to socioeconomic status, ethnicity, documentation status, and any other discriminatory factor.

AMPHS' Adult Literacy Program focuses on providing English language instruction to adults 16 years of age and over. In addition to developing grammar, speaking, reading and writing skills, we enrich student education through experiential learning such as field trips, special events, conversation groups, and workshops on immigrant rights.

Since it was founded in 2010 as an organization run entirely by volunteers, AMPHS has grown to an organization of over 30 dedicated volunteers and staff looking to make a difference in their communities, serving thousands of individuals per year. It is active in various healthcare and immigration coalitions and its work has been featured in renowned media outlets.
